

Indian Church History: or an Account of the First Planting of the Gospel, in Syria, Mesopotamia, and India: With an Accurate Relation of the First Christian Missions in China

THE Acts of the Apostles, as it is the most interesting account which we possess of the early promulgation of the Christian faith, is probably the only genuine document worthy of our confidence, which details the proceedings of any of the chosen and extraordinary persons originally employed by Christ, as the messengers of his truth to mankind. The facts which that invaluable record exhibits, are such as came for the most part under the immediate observation of the writer, quorum pars magna fuit, or were supplied by the testimony of those who were eye-witnesses of them and his associates. With few exceptions, Luke has limited the subject of his History, to transactions that relate to the Apostle Paul, as employed in introducing the Gospel among the Gentiles. It is not, however, to be supposed that the other Apostles of Christ were deficient in any of the duties resulting from their high appointment. We have indeed, from the very circumstance of their being selected and qualified by Him as his special servants, the strongest presumption that, ere the death by which they glorified God removed them from the world, they had preached repentance and remission of sins among nations whose dwellings were far remote from Jerusalem, Syria, Cilicia, and Asia, Macedonia and Italy, were favored with Apostolic visits, and received in the earliest period of the Christian history the word of life; and unquestionably other countries were, during the same age, enlightened by, Divine truth, and numerous testimonies to its power obtained in the conversion of their idolatrous inhabitants; Authentic accounts of such changes, of the progress of Christianity among the nations, and the proceedings of the persons who; first dispensed its blessings to numerous tribes of men; would be highly gratifying. But do such accounts exist? Where are they to be found? To what extent shall we be enabled to make additions to the Scriptural records of this subject? There is an abundance of relations concerning the first promulgators of the Christian Faith; but little indeed that is worthy of the credit due to genuine history, is to be found among them. Fabulous narratives and pompous legends have been, copiously, furnished, by men whose ingenuity was greater than their honesty, to excite and gratify the spirit; of superstitious curiosity in the multitude; a spirit of which these compilers well knew how to avail themselves for their own purposes and interest. The passions of men, everywhere the same, have been engaged with surprising facility on the side of superstition; and credulity has told its wonderful tales to willing hearers who have become believers in the most extravagant and senseless stories. It is well-known what impositions have been practiced in the Romish Church, and how its legends have subserved the cause of its tyrannic rulers. The Oriental Churches may be much less marked by the corruptions which have pervaded those of the West, but all seem to have gone out of the way, and in a less or a greater measure, to have lost the simplicity of the Gospel.
